ABSTRACT

A catalog of semi-annotated topical listings of curriculum resources, published between 1960 and 1980, for use by educators in small Alaska high schools, contains sections on communication arts (108 items), cultural ecology (269 items), and environmental studies (363 items). Listings are presented on pages ruled into grids; for each item the title, publication date, and sources are given, plus grid marks indicating subcategory of subject and type of material. Material type subcategories are academic paper, audio-visual, book, government document, lesson unit(s), newsletter, pamphlet, periodical, resource center, service, special program, and other. Subject categories for communication arts are broadcasting, creative writing, drama, film-making, general teaching aid, language and language arts, library use, oral history, poetry, print media, and visual arts. Cultural ecology subjects include careers, consumer protection, economics and commerce, health and society, history and archaeology, Native Americans, Native corporations, and state and local government. Under environmental studies are air, energy education, forests and timber, mining, northern technology, water resources, weather and climate, wildlife, environmental education, and other; posters are an additional material type subcategory. A section of general reference materials contains titles and source addresses for 41 further items. (MH)

A NOTE ON HOW TO USE THIS PUBLICATION

This publication contains semi-annotated listings of print, audio-visual, agency, service, and special program resources in the areas of communication arts, cultural ecology, and environmental studies for the especial use of the small high school educator in Alaska.

On the pages following, the educator will find these topical listings described in terms of specific subject matter and the form the material takes, whether it be a book or a film. Addresses, current when the materials were published or produced, have been given.

Great effort has been made to insure that the "type of material" descriptions are accurate. In cases where the editors found it difficult to distinguish between a book or a pamphlet, for example, emphasis was placed on the format of the publication rather than the materials constructing it in order to determine what kind of publication was at hand. Do not expect everything that one might order under the heading "book" to be hardcover and slick-paged.

The Center for Cross-Cultural Studies welcomes user commentary, particularly in the area of listings that become no longer available, addresses which have changed, or materials updated by the initiating author or agency. Suggested listings which are not included in this catalog and which fall under the topics of communication arts, cultural ecology, or environmental studies are encouraged by the Center from educators.
